

Mountain fig

Mountain fig or rock fig (called "Anjeer Kohi" in Persian) is natural or wild fig, naturally growing in the rocky mountainous area of the Kavir desert of Iran especially on Khorasan mountain of Kohestan. the only difference between the mountain fig and other figs is their resistance of mountain fig to dry and cold climates. It usually does not need any irrigation and is able to resist extremely dry weather and -40 degree. Its dry fruit is very delicious. The most productive and the oldest Mountain fig trees are located in Zibad mountains.
